Instructional Comfort Level & Interest

Help us keep track of your interests/experience, as well as do our best to ensure the best possible matches between students and instructors.

- Check the “Interested” column if you are interested in working with a particular disability/discipline listed below but have never taught it. Otherwise, leave it blank.
- If you have had some experience in a discipline listed below, let us know at what level you are presently comfortable and what goal you have for this season. Comfort levels include ski buddy, assistant instructor and lead instructor.

Description of instruction level:

- Ski Buddy: Many of our students in various disciplines are independent skiers, but need some assistance while out on the snow. They may need a mountain guide, they may need help getting up if they fall, they may need help or guidance getting on the lift, or they may just need a friend to ski with.
- Assistant Instructor: If you want to learn more about teaching a discipline, this is a great place to be. You’ll begin to learn more about the discipline and the teaching progression and you’ll always have a lead instructor with you.
- Lead Instructor: If you’re a Lead Instructor, you are ready to teach lessons in this discipline on your own. You may also be asked to help work with Assistant Instructors. Don’t worry, not all lessons as a Lead Instructor are “solo.” Many students will need two instructors.

For example: Last season you did a blind clinic but you never really taught. Your present comfort level might be Ski Buddy and your goal might be to work up to Assistant Instructor by the end of the season.

Discipline	Interested? (Y/N)	Present comfort level	Goal for this season
Cognitive skiing
Snowboard
Mono/Bi ski
3-track
4-track
Blind/visually impaired
Ski bike

Please check which weight levels you feel comfortable with on lessons.

Weight (in lbs.)	Stand Up (Independent)	Stand Up (Requires assistance)	Sit-Down
125 or less
125 to 149
150 to 199
200+
